Index Generator

The Index Generator is a simple program, developed specifically in order to help individuals index their books easier. This utility supports import from IDXs and PDF, while export is available for IDX, TXT, DOC, RTF and PDF. The interface is highly intuitive, with a simple design, thus permitting both novice and experienced users to get around it, without facing problems. The main window is comprised of several panels in which one can observe a tree view of all the words, details about the index and a preview of the page in which it appears. Once you upload a document to the program, all the words are detected and indexed, along with the page number(s) they appear at. The content is displayed alphabetically, and you are required to choose all the words you want to include in the project. It is possible to edit the index, seeing that you can italicize or bold the title and page numbers, or capitalize the word. In addition to that, you can add references and phrases, as well as set headings. This software tool lets you change the first letter of the titles to lowercase or uppercase, append character(s) after the indexed word, preview the project, exclude particular pages and view the book. Aside from that, you can configure the referral format (text before and after, enclose in parenthesis, brackets or brace) and the index entry text (font, size, color, indent, alignment etc.). In conclusion, with a good response time, minimal CPU and memory usage, Index Generator is an efficient piece of software. We did not register bugs, crashes or errors during our tests.
